

ABSTRACT

A connector used for various medical instruments, infusion containers, and infusion devices to connect a tube. The connector includes a cylindrical valve made of elastic material with a closable slit so that a tube can be connected without passing through the valve.